Dear Srinivasarao garu:

Thanks for your message. Here is one topic which may be feasible.

Phase contrast microscope- everybody is familiar with the microscope but not many know about the phase contrast microscope, the principle was invented in 1930's (Nobel prize for Fritz Zernike) and the commercial instrument is available in 1950's. Biologists use it to look at transparent objects like cells (not visible with microscope- before the phase contrast microscope they had to stain the cell to introduce a little absorption but in doing so the live cell is killed). The biology students in your college may be using it but may not know how it works. Pl ask your physics students to study the basic physics involved and look at the instrument in the biology dept and the experiments they are doing. Pl let me have some feedback.

Best regards

Dear Dr. Srinivasa Rao garu:

Both myself and my wife Lalitha immensely enjoyed our visit to our Alma Matur, one of the great institutions in the country to which we are deeply indebted for the invaluable training we received. We are trying to offer a token of our appreciation. We are still on the road and get back home by the end of March. Some time in April we will arrange our humble donation of about two lakhs Rs so that you can arrange an annual award for a bright student in the name of Voruganti Adilakshmi and Lakshmikantham (Lalitha's parents). We hope you will be gracious to accept and implement it. Best regards to you all
